

Diplomatic Studies

General Editor: Jan Melissen

Director of the Clingendael Diplomatic Studies Programme, Netherlands Institute of International Relations 'Clingendael'

Professor of Diplomacy at Antwerp University

Founding Co-Editor of The Hague Journal of Diplomacy

Diplomatic Studies is a peer reviewed book series that encourages original work on diplomacy and its role in international relations. The broad scope of the series reflects the inter-disciplinary and inclusive nature of diplomatic studies, and it is therefore open to contributors from a variety of academic disciplines and backgrounds. Authors will include academics, researchers from think tanks, and people with professional experience in diplomacy.

The series' focus is wide-ranging and it publishes high-quality research on the theory, practice, and techniques of diplomacy. It aims to advance the understanding of the importance of diplomacy to international relations, and engage in debates on diplomatic innovation. The series will deal with bilateral and multilateral diplomacy, but also with a variety of other forms of diplomatic practice, such as public diplomacy, track-two diplomacy, and sub-state diplomacy. It also welcomes studies on age-old functions of the institution of diplomacy, including international negotiation and mediation, as well as less traditional ones that are emerging in the current international environment.

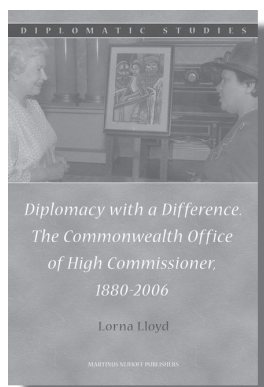

Diplomatic Studies will be accessible to a broad readership of academics, diplomats and other practitioners of diplomacy, as well as university students.

This book illuminates two familiar phenomena – diplomacy and the Commonwealth – from a new and unfamiliar angle: the atypical way in which the Commonwealth's members came to, and continue to, engage in official relations with each other. This innovative and wide-ranging study is based on archival material from four states, interviews and correspondence with diplomats, and a wide range of secondary sources.

It shows how members of an empire found it necessary to engage in diplomacy and, in so doing, created a singular, and often remarkably intimate, diplomatic system. The result is a fascinating, multidisciplinary exploration of the evolving Commonwealth and the way in which its 53 members and Ireland conduct diplomacy with one another, and in so doing have contributed a distinctive terminology to the diplomatic lexicon.

Lorna Lloyd was educated at the London School of Economics and teaches International Relations at Keele University. She has written Peace through Law. Britain and the International Court in the 1920s (The Boydell Press for the Royal Historical Society, 1997), and is a co-author of International Organisation in World Politics (Palgrave Macmillan, 3rd edition, 2004).
